

THE STRIKERS AND THE DAY BOOK WISH TO THANK DAY BOOK READERS FOR THEIR HELP

The rich man may hand out his coin
to a cause,

And then let it drift from his mind.

The poor man must ponder and figure
and pause,

To see how far he'll be behind.

The check for a hundred that comes from the man

Who pulls down ten times that much dough

Brings with it the spirit—but not any more

Than the buck from the poor man
—that's so.

The Day Book's garment workers' strike fund is closed. For a grand total The Day Book has turned two thousand, ninety-five dollars and eighty-four cents over to the strikers. In figures that looks like this—$2,095.84. And that much money helps out mightily in a case like the garment strikers'.

Readers of The Day Book "came through" royally, and without any coaxing. There seemed to be real brotherly and sisterly feeling in the donations that came in. There was much more than just plain cold cash in the amount donated. There was sympathy. Who can say that sympathy isn't a welcome thing in time of trouble?

On behalf of Sidney Hillmann and all the strikers, and also on behalf of The Day Book, we want to thank our readers most emphatically for the help that has been given.

The fund was a huge success. In a letter to The Day Book the garment workers hand a good share of the credit to The Day Book. We wish to turn the big majority of that credit over to the donors to the fund. They are the ones who made it a success. Here's to them—the whole crew. Sidney Hillman, the strikers, and The Day Book wish you all a Merry Christmas and a most prosperous New Year,

Here is the letter from the strikers' headquarters, received this morning:

The Day Book: On behalf of the striking clothing workers the officers of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America wish to express their sincere thanks to you, your paper and its readers for the moral and financial support The Day Book and its readers have been to them during the strike. The Day Book not only stood by the clothing workers during their trouble, but was a great factor in organizing them, prior to the strike, in giving the necessary news during the campaign of organization.

The Day Book has been a source of inspiration to the strikers by its fair treatment of strike news and words of encouragement in its columns. All workers and their friends true to the cause of labor should not only be readers, but enthusiastic boosters of your paper, which, although small in form, is very large in accomplishments for the under dogs in society.

We hope that the influence of The Day Book for good will grow greater, knowing that you will do the right thing.

We stand by our friends.

Fraternally yours, F. Rosenblum,
Member G. E. B. A. C. W. of A.; J. S.

—O—O— UNION DEFENDS BUCHANAN

Because "organized capital and its subsidized press" have attacked Frank Buchanan, representative to congress from the seventh Illinois district, the Int. Ass'n of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Ironworkers and Pile Drivers, Local 1, passed a resolution upholding Buchanan at their weekly meeting last night.

He is a member of the ironworkers' union and they intend to stick by him.
